

17. (Amended twice) A method for functionally modifying a T-cell specific to an antigen, comprising:

CI providing a dendritic cell activated in the presence of a glucocorticoid hormone and capable of functionally modifying said T-cell such that the response of T-cell to said antigen is altered;

and

co-cultivating said T-cell and said dendritic cell.